Always Begin Bight

ply. Success is but a systemyme for bosining right.

Who, for example, is the healthiest, the early riser or the sluggard? It is the man who begins the day right, by leaving his bed with the sun, and inhaling the fresh air of morning, not the one who remains till eight or nine o'clock in a close chamber, sleeping a dull, stupifying sleep. Who gets through his day's work the easiest? The early riser. The man of business, who is at his store is somest, is always best prepared for the customers of the day, and often, indeed, has sold many a bill before his laggard neighbors are about. Sir Walter Scott used to have half his day's writing thin shed before breakfast. A shrewd observer has said that a late riser consumes the day in trying to recover the hours he lost in the morning. Mind and body are both freshest early in the day. The tlawyer should think, the minister study, the author write, the valetudinarian walk or ride, and the mechanic or farmer be at work as early as pos-

Nor is this all. The great bulk of enterprises that fail owe their ruin to not having been begun right. A business is undertaken without sufficient capital, connexion, or knowledge. It ends unfavorably. Why? Because it was not begun cient capital, connexion, or knowledge. It ends unfavorably. Why? Because it was not begun right. A young professional man, whose probationary period of study has been spent in pleasure rather than in hard reading, complains that he cannot succeed. Why, again? Because he has not begun right either? A stock company blows up. Still why? Ten to one the means employed were not adequate to the end, or else it was started with inefficient officers; and in either case it was not begun right. Two young housekeepers break up their gay establishment, the lady going home, perhaps to her father's, taking her husband with her. Why? They did not begin right, for they commenced on too large a scale, forgetting that the expenses of a family increase every year, and that, in no event, is it safe for a man to live up to his income. An inventor starts a manufactory, in which his improvements in machinery is brought into play; but after a while he finds himself insolvent; his factory is sold; another reaps where he has sown. Why? Alas! like too many others, he has undertaken more than he has means to carry through. He did not begin right, and his ruin was the consequence.

But, above all things, life should be begun right.

to carry through. He did not begin right, and his ruin was the consequence.

But, above all things, life should be begun right. Young men rarely know how much their conduct, during their first few years, affects their subsequent success. It is not only that older persons, in the same business, form their opinions of them at this time, but that every beginner acquires, during these years, habits for good or ill which color his whole future career. We have seen some of the ablest young men, with every advantage of fortune and friends, sow the seeds of ruin and early death by indulging too freely in the first years of manhood. We have seen others, with far less capacity, and without any backing but industry and energy, rise gradually to fortune and influence. Franklin is a familiar illustration of what a man can do who begins right. If he had what a man can do who begins right. If he had been too proud to eat rolls in the street when he been too proud to eat rolls in the street when he was a poor boy, he would never have bean minister plenipotentiary to the court of France.

Always begin right! Survey the whole ground before you commence any undertaking, and you will then be prepared to go forward successfully. Neglect this, however, and you are almost sure to fail. In other words, begin right. A good commencement is half the battle. A false first step is almost certain defeat. Begin Right!

A Tough Story.—A correspondent of the New York Tribune furnishes the following tough story in regard to what he has seen in the way of spiritualism and table-turning. It is decidedly ahead of any thing we have yet seen:

"On the evening of Sunday, August 7, our circle assembled as usual, for the purpose of holding intercourse with those departed from our earthly sphere. Seating ourselves in the usual order, we Seating ourselves in the usual order, we been joined in the chain of harmonia brotherhood longer than fifteen minutes, when our medium (Miss Austin) gave indications of approaching friends. Calmly awaiting their first manifestation, we sat attentively watching her movements, when all at once, and to the no small astonishment of those present, she gradually com-menced rising from her seat, and rose until she had assumed a position over the table, at an altitude of five feet from the floor. In this position she remained for some time, until she was gradually lowered to within one-sixteenth of the table, when the following directions were spelled out by raps: 'Take your hands off the table, move back from it three feet; then join hands and form a complete circle. In accordance with this, we moved to the positions assigned us, when the medium was again raised to her former position, the table following at the aforesaid distance. In this position they remained suspended, until the me-dium was, by the same invisible power, brought to a position directly under 'the table.' And now commenced one of the grandest and awe-inspiring scenes it has ever been the lot of human eye to places by the table again as usual.

"The room was filled with melody the most sublime; a choir of angel voices seemed discoursing heaven's choicest harmony, while the well-known raps responded in tones of sweetest unison to these enchanting strains. Slowly and sweetly did the raps responded in tones of sweetest unison to these enchanting strains. Slowly and sweetly did the music of the spheres recede, until the listening ear could only catch its lingering cadence in the distance. Oh, it was a happy glimpse of immortality, and dull, indeed, must be the soul that tality, and dull, indeed, must be the soul that would not have responded to the joyful call. But as yet the most startling part of the phenomenon is to be told. After the medium had again been permitted to resume her place in the circle, we were directed to open the window, and take our places by the table again as usual.

"After we had sat there for a few seconds, the table began to vibrate violently—so much so, indeed, that we were compelled to break the circle, and mark in silence the new development. Long had we not waited before it became suddenly waited a vising contly from the floor, it messed quiet, and, rising gently from the floor, it passed out of the window without a human hand being on it. It was thus, and while the table yet remained outside, rapped out: "Take it in'—an order we immediately proceeded to obey; but judge our astonishment when we found that the table could not be again brought back, its narrowest width being more than eighteen inches wider than the window through which I aver it passed."

A youth asked his father's sanction to his pro ject of marriage. The old gentleman, requesting his son to pray with him, prayed that if the match was against the will of the Lord he would throw son interrupting, cried:
"Oh, Lord, dont you do it; for I must have her

BY TENEGRAPH.

Bosrox, August 18.—Halifax papers of the 16th have been received by the America. On Friday Cemmodore Shubrick and the officers of the Princeton were entertained by the Mayor and Aldermen of Halifax. On Saturday a grand entertainment was given on board the Princeton, which was attended by two or three hundred of the inhabitants of Halifax, including the Mayor, General Gore, Admiral Seymour, the American Consul, &c. The Princeton will put to sea soon.

The French steamer Veloce had arrived at St. John's.

great privations for nine days, were picked by a French vessel and carried into San Antonio.

The schooners Snow Squall and Emily Swift arrived at Gloucester on the 16th, from the northeast fishing grounds. Both vessels had been boarded by English gunboats and cutters, and the names of the vessels, number of crews, and quantity of mackerel taken down. They report that the schooner Hannibal, of Beverly, was chased out of Fox river, where she had put in for a harbor, by an English cutter, at night, about two weeks since. They saw nothing of the American squadron. Spoke several of the Gloucester fleet, with small fares of mackerel.

The British steamer Devastation was seen cruising about the fishing grounds.

Another account says the report that American vessels were not allowed to enter the Bay of Chaleur is confirmed. A steamer and several cutters guarded the mouth of the bay, to intercept all who attempted to enter. It was reported that one of the vessels had taken a swivel out of the schooner Garland, of Newburyport.

Fugitive Stave Case.

CINCINNATI, August 16.—A negro man, named George McQuery, alias "Wash," was brought to this city last night from Piqua, as a fugitive slave claimed by Henry Miller, of Kentucky. The colored people gathered in large numbers around the Galt House, where the fugitive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was considered by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of positive was guarded by the United States marshal and a number of posit by the United States marshal and a number of police, and exhibited much feeling, but dispersed again upon being assured that the prisoner should have a trial to-day. This morning the fugitive was brought before Judge McLean, of the United States court, where the case was heard and adjourned until to-morrow morning. The evidence was decidedly in favor of Mr. Miller's claim, the fugitive having confessed himself to be his slave. The counsel, however, appear to rely on the unconstitutionality of the law.

Cincinnati, August 18.—The decision of Judge McLean makes two columns in the Commercial. After reviewing the facts and evidence in the case, the judge decided the testimony to be conclusive in favor of the claimant.

In answer to objections raised by the counsel for the slave, he holds that the Fugitive Slave law of 1793 and 1850 are constitutional, and that no State has power to pass a law preventing fugitives from being delivered up to those to whom they owe service. That no proof was necessary before the Supreme Court that slavery existed in the State from whence the furitive escaped, as it should be taken preme Court that slavery existed in the State from whence the fugitive escaped, as it should be taken for granted that the Supreme Judge knew the laws of all the States. That the State could not be compelled to give up fugitives by a law of Congress, if the provisions in the Constitution did not do so. That slavery can only exist by authority of law, and as it so exists in slave States, said law not being an infringement of the Constitution, the free States are bound to recognise it in delivering up slaves from these States, upon clear proof that they are such.

Important from New Mexico.

New Orleans, August 17.—The Picagune has advices from El Paso, Mexico, to the 23d July. Great excitement existed in consequence of a party of Americans attacking the jail to rescue some returned Californians, who they alleged had been unjustly imprisoned by the Mexicans.

A guard of Mexican troops fired on the Americans killing the district attenue of Fl Parents cans, killing the district attorney of El Paso county, Texas, and wounding several others. The final result of this affray had not been ascertained; but serious consequences were apprehended.

The Mexicans were armed and drilling near the LOCAL MATTERS.

IN SEARCH OF AN ITEM, On Thursday afternoon, a facetious friend provided that if we would accompany him in a walk he would treat us to a rich item to adorn the local column-he depending upon his wit to pick it up on the way. He is a philosopher, looking upon the world as a vast theatre, where all have their entrances and exits, and seems to prefer comedy for his entertainment. ing gentleman" to the man who "does" the "low patriotism has defended.

She may be a widow, or cursed knife or a pistol as an intimidator; distraining the with a husband who spends his time at the drink-poor for rent, and killing dogs with a club or ng-house, forgetful of his vow made in earlier changing scenes of life. Her ragged children may mands such performances. Among the extra ser be anxiously watching for her return, that she vices of officer Martin, yesterday, was that of may prepare their 'frugal meal,' which, though wheel-barrowing a drunken black man (who had rude, will be sweeter to their sharpened appetites fallen into the gutter, unable to walk from the than the richest feast that could be spread before effects of intemperance) to the watch-house, them that 'fare sumptuously' every day, and who are clothed, if not in 'purple and fine linen,' in superfine broadcloth, and have accounts in bank, vith no treasure in heaven."

"But this will not interest the public," we said aterrupting his sympathizing train of remark; we want something more stirring." Just at this noment fifty boys rushed round a corner. They were irresistibly hurried on by a curiosity to learn the result of a police movement, which had agi-tated several neighborhoods. In the advance was a constable, holding with a vice-like grasp a juvenile by the arm, and dragging him off to a magistrate's office. The twain entered the door of judgment before we could bring up the rear; and we arrived only to learn that "a full investigation of the affair" would not take place until Saturday fternoon, and that the little fellow was one of a time to be kept secret, so as not to get into the time to be kept secret, so as not to get into the mon Council, to supply the vacancy caused by papers, lest the ends of justice might be thwarted. A restive horse next attracted attention. We that Board. ould see nothing peculiarly attractive in the animal or its rider; but our friend insisted that we should tarry awhile to witness the horsemanship The prancing and the shying threatened an acc dent, and it would be well to await the result-not that he in the least degree desired such a ca astrophe, (for he would rather mend a leg than break one,) but if such a thing should happen, he generously wanted us to have the earliest intelli-gence respecting it! However, the horse, after cutting a few antics, perhaps rather under the agony of a sore back than a restive spirit, trotted with meek resignation many his contractions. with meek resignation upon his way.

"But where is the "rich item you promised t s;" we asked. "Why, I'm sure," he responded, I have given you several already. But there nother; just count. Seventeen hackney coache are standing idle before the National Hotel, and seven before Brown's. You can say that this is ndicative of the want of constant employment or those aristocratic jehus, who sneer at the omibuses, the wagons of the people-"the million"as they lumber lazily between the Capitol and Georgetown, picking up, not items, like ourselves, out passengers and "fourpences" on the way.

We were not yet satisfied. We had yet ob We were not yet satisfied. We had yet obtained nothing worthy of especial note, and were on our way home. Our friend had enlivened us with sundry jokes and brilliant flashes, but these were not strictly local items. "Ah! here," said he, "is a good thing at last; if not a good item, at least good fruit. Two urchins, apparently ten and twelve years of age, were sitting near a store door, with a little basket in front of them containing the state of the state with a little basket in front of them containing a dozon or so of peaches, which they exposed for sale—the commencement or foundation of a pursuit which may make them our future leading merchants, at least as soon as we shall have the commerce. The Sentinel will advocate such a progressive foreign policy as will suit itself to the exigencies and correspond with the expanding interests of the country. That policy should be energetic and decided; but should temper firmness with liberality, and make its highest ends consist with the strictest principles of justice. The real interests of the country was perfectly and common in the strict of the country was perfectly as the common of the country was perfectly as the consist with the strict of the country was perfectly as the consist with the country was perfectly as the country was the coun of the country upon each occasion demanding at-tention will be its guide in the course the Sentinel will pursue.

The national policy of the world in this age is

The national policy of the world in this age is essentially aggressive. In the growing sense of weakness of some of the nations of the Old World and the ambitious restlessness of others, a common motive to colonial extension has developed itself.

Our settled determination to repel interference from abroad with our own domestic concerns will prompt us to avoid it in the affairs of other countries, unless by their foreign or colonial policy our peace should be threatened, our security endan-prompt us to avoid it in the affairs of other countries, unless by their foreign or colonial policy our peace should be threatened, our security endangered, or our interests invaded. For when the selfish interests of other autions prompt a foreign or colonial policy which infringes upon our rights and places in the pathway of our commerces dangerous and unfriendly rival, such a policy must be resisted by remonstrance, and if need be by war.

Our foreign policy should indeed be defensive; but to be properly defensive it must sometimes be apparently aggressive. Our Administration should be vigilant, watchful, and energetic. The world is full of important movements, commercial and political, deeply concerning American trade and American power. It is time we had an American foreign policy. We must have it. We cannot avoid it if we would. We have larger interests and a greater stake in the world and its destiny than every other people. We occupy the best portion of a continent, with no neighbors but a colony and a worn out anarchical despotism. We are the only people whose own land, without colonial dependencies, is washed by the two great oceans of the world. Our agricultural productions are more waried and more essential to civilized life and to human progress—our mineral and manufacturing resources more vast—our facilities and capacity for internal and foreign commerce more extended than those of any other people living under one government. A continent to a great extent unexplored and exhaustless in its yet hidden wealth is at our feet. European trade seeks the great East through avenues which are at our doors, or must be made through our own limits. Europe, Asia, Africa, and the isless of the sea, lying all around us, look to us as the rising power, through the agency of whose example, and ever all around us, look to us as the rising power, through the agency of whose example, and ever widening and extending, though peaceful influ-ences, the bleasings of liberty, civilization, and religion, are destined to triumph over the barba

Such, then, is the chart by which we shall be guided. Independent and free, we shall endeavor to be honest and truthful. The true friends o Democratic principles, we shall cordially support and defend. Itsenemics in the field or in ambush we shall oppose, and on all proper occasions denounce.

we shall oppose, and on all proper occasions denounce.

To our future brethren of the press we extend the hand of friendly greeting. The Sentinel is the rival of no press of its own party—the personal enemy of none of the other.

The present Democratic Administration has our best wishes for its success in the establishment of the great principles upon which it came into power; and in its honest labors to attain such an end itwill find the Sentinel its friend and coadjutor.
